EXPERIENCING DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

Domestic violence, contact the union immediately.

WHAT CAN I DO IF MY EMPLOYER TREATS ME UNFAIRLY AT WORK OR SACKS ME?

• if management ask you to have a ‘chat’ or meeting about your work, ask whether you do lose your job, and can’t access the workplace).

• keep a copy of workplace policies and procedures, such as disciplinary policies. Keep

• keep a written record of all performance related conversations with managers. Try to attend, you should speak to the union first.

What if my job is being threatened (performance management)?

• if your performance is being reviewed, ask to see file

• if you are written up, ask to see file

You only need to tell your workplace about things that directly affect or impact on your work.

ATTITUDES TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE VARY: SOME WORKPLACES ARE SUPPORTIVE, PROVIDING PAID

What if I’m being prevented from getting to work (or coming in late)?

• making threats to harm you or your co-workers at work

• constantly calling, emailing or texting you at work

• coming into or hanging around your workplace to intimidate you

• police can trace calls and order phone records

• save and print out copies of facebook (and similar social networks) messages (in case

Damage to your personal files

• your employer can ask you to give them access to your personal email

• don’t respond to abusive messages from your answer your phone?

• screen calls and voicemail – can someone else diversion or block emails from any email address

Abusive calls, texts and emails

• workplace may also have a policy on workplace violence.

Check your workplace health & safety policy: many workplaces have one. Your

They may ask you to identify and call police if necessary

Abusive actions

• asking your workplace to notify relevant staff not to tell anyone information about your

Another thing to consider is whether you need to negotiate time off to organise safety might be at risk.

It can be. Work may be where you feel safe and respected and what is happening at

Domestic violence can impact on you at work in the following ways:

• being harassed or intimidated at work

• struggling to manage your workload and deadlines

• police can trace calls and order phone records

• save and print out copies of facebook (and similar social networks) messages (in case

Networks

• police can trace calls and order phone records

• save and print out copies of facebook (and similar social networks) messages (in case

MATERIAL IN WORKPLACE

• police can trace calls and order phone records

• save and print out copies of facebook (and similar social networks) messages (in case

Your workplace is likely to include information about attendance, performance and conduct. If your

WORKPLACES USUALLY HAVE POLICIES ABOUT WHAT INFORMATION GOES ON YOUR PERSONAL FILE. YOUR

FILE IS LIKELY TO INCLUDE INFORMATION ABOUT ATTENDANCE, PERFORMANCE AND CONDUCT. IF YOUR

YOUR JOB

YOUR JOB

YOU AND...
WHAT IS FAMILY VIOLENCE?

Domestic violence can take many different forms including intimidation, coercion or isolation, emotional, physical, sexual, mental, financial and spiritual abuse. If you feel scared of a partner, ex-partner or a family member, you may be experiencing domestic violence.

Domestic violence can also occur between people in an intimate relationship who do not live together, between people in same-sex relationships, between carers and the person in their care and between people in relationships. Men can also be victims of domestic violence.

The violence tends to increase over time, becoming more serious and more frequent. It harms both the victim and others including children who witness the abuse.

Data collected by the world health organization and amnesty international show that one out of three women has experienced violence and that violence is the leading cause of death amongst women aged 16 to 44. It is estimated that 70% of this violence occurs in the family. Around 60% of affected women are scared and ashamed, and suffer in silence, without taking any steps to break the circle of violence. This has a negative impact on their health, their self-esteem, and their productivity at work.

Domestic violence is a complex problem of large dimensions which affects people from all regions, professions, and social backgrounds around the world. It is about power and control.

IS DOMESTIC VIOLENCE A WORKPLACE ISSUE?

It can be. Work may be where you feel safe and respected and what is happening at home has no impact on your performance or safety - it is a private matter. But domestic violence can impact on you at work in the following ways:

• being prevented or delayed from getting to work
• being harassed or intimidated at work
• distressed or crying at work
• struggling to manage your workload and deadlines
• covering up what is happening

Domestic violence can be stressful, upsetting and distracting. It can make it hard to perform your duties and can also be a workplace safety risk.
Domestic violence impacting at work

If domestic violence is affecting your attendance, performance and safety at work then it is important that you get legal protection as soon as possible [and that the workplace is included as a protected place – amend if this is not the legal arrangement in your country].

Legal position

Insert here the legal position in your country.

Should I tell my employer (supervisor/manager) about what is happening?

You only need to tell your workplace about things that directly affect or impact on your work.

Is the abusive person:
- constantly calling, emailing or texting you at work
- following you to or from work
- making threats to harm you or your co-workers at work
- threatening to tell your boss embarrassing personal information
- coming into or hanging around your workplace to intimidate you

If any of these things are happening, you should tell your workplace. Your job and your safety might be at risk.

Another thing to consider is whether you need to negotiate time off to organise temporary safety measures such as changes to your working times and patterns, or attend appointments with support services, your child's school, your bank or to go to court.

Telling your workplace may be difficult, but being upfront about your situation may make it easier if the abusive person tries to cause trouble for you at work.

The capacity to stay financially independent is very important in surviving domestic violence and so remaining employed is vital.

Attitudes to domestic violence vary: some workplaces are supportive, providing paid leave and flexible working arrangements. Others are less supportive or not supportive at all or may not be aware of the issue.

Generally it's better to get advice from your union before raising the issue at work. Your union representative or the medical staff at the workplace may also assist you in raising the issue.

IT'S IMPORTANT TO REMEMBER THAT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE IS NOT YOUR FAULT AND YOU SHOULD NOT FEEL ASHAMED. YOU HAVE A RIGHT TO FEEL SAFE AT HOME AND SAFE AT WORK.
Keep Records
Make a record of how the family violence is affecting you at work: dates, times, details (where, what happened, what was said, any witnesses). This will help you if you decide to report any incidents to the police and would provide evidence to a court if necessary.

SAFETY AT WORK
Workplaces have a duty to ensure health and safety. Workers have a duty to take reasonable care to protect their own safety.

You can talk to your workplace about what it can do to assist you to be safe and keep doing your job. Safety planning can include things like:
• having someone walk you to your car or transport when you leave work
• asking your workplace to notify relevant staff not to tell anyone information about your location or movements
• making sure you’re not left alone at a work location with public access
• providing a photo of the abusive person to front desk staff, so that they can identify them and call the police if necessary

Check your workplace health & safety policy: many workplaces have one. Your workplace may also have a policy on workplace violence.

Abusive calls, texts and emails
A supportive workplace can assist in protecting you from abusive calls and emails. Your workplace may already have policies and procedures on this. Options include:

• report calls or text messages containing threats of harm to the police (and workplace security) immediately. Note the time, date, length and content
• screen calls and voicemail – can someone else answer your phone?
• block or divert emails so you don’t have to see them. Some email software (such as outlook) allows you to create ‘rules’ to automatically divert or block emails from any email address
• notify the abusive person’s workplace if they are harassing you from their workplace as they are misusing work time/resources
• don’t respond to abusive messages from your work email account or phone. This could be a breach of your work contract or workplace communications policy
• save abusive emails and text messages.
• save and print out copies of facebook (and similar social networks) messages (in case the sender deletes their account)
• police can trace calls and order phone records

Again, it's important to keep good records of any abusive phone calls, text messages or emails.

If I tell my workplace, will it be kept confidential?
Workplaces usually have policies about what information goes on your personal file. Your file is likely to include information about attendance, performance and conduct. If your workplace has specific rights and entitlements for workers experiencing family violence it is likely to be committed to confidentiality. If you disclose domestic violence to your workplace, you should ask for it to be kept confidential and not communicated to other people unless necessary for legal or safety reasons.

What if I’m being prevented from getting to work (or coming in late)?
If you have to miss work or are late due to domestic violence, you should call to tell your workplace you are unable to attend or will be late. If you don’t turn up, they could assume you’ve quit. If you don’t feel safe to tell your workplace why you’re late or can’t attend, you should speak to the union first.

What if my job is being threatened (performance management)?
If you have received a warning about performance issues, or you think you could lose your job, you need to contact the union as soon as possible.

Taking these steps may also be helpful:
• keep a written record of all performance related conversations with managers. Try to get managers to put their concerns and issues in writing
• ask for copies of any performance reviews (if relevant)
• keep a copy of workplace policies and procedures, such as disciplinary policies. Keep these records in hardcopy at home or in your car, don’t leave them at work (just in case you do lose your job, and can’t access the workplace).
• if management ask you to have a ‘chat’ or meeting about your work, ask whether you can have a support person present and for time to prepare
• discuss the meeting with the union in advance of the meeting so you are prepared
• take detailed notes during the meeting
• try to stay calm and polite in dealings with co-workers and management

What can i do if my employer treats me unfairly at work or sacks me?
If your employer treats you unfairly or tried to sack you because of your experience of domestic violence, contact the union immediately.
Where can I get support and advice?
The workplace is often the safest place from where to access advice and assistance as you can gather the information without fear of discovery or interruption.

Your union representative should also have a list of the support services offered in your area and can refer you to appropriate organisations that deal with family violence.

Your union representative may be trained in assisting members with domestic violence issues.

Any medical staff at the workplace could also provide additional support.

Your employer may have a policy on domestic violence. That would provide further information and, ideally, name trained contact people who can assist.

Again, your union representative can advise you on these matters.
What can I do if my employer treats me unfairly at work or sacks me?

- Try to stay calm and polite in dealings with co-workers and management.
- Discuss the meeting with the union in advance of the meeting so you are prepared.
- Keep a copy of workplace policies and procedures, such as disciplinary policies. Keep.
- Ask for copies of any performance reviews (if relevant).
- Get managers to put their concerns and issues in writing.

Taking these steps may also be helpful:

What if my job is being threatened (performance management)?

Attend appointments with support services, your child’s school, your bank or to go to

What if I’m being prevented from getting to work (or coming in late)?

If I tell my workplace, will it be kept confidential?

Domestic violence can be stressful, upsetting and distracting. It can make it hard to

IS DOMESTIC VIOLENCE A WORKPLACE ISSUE?

Domestic violence can take many different forms

ATTITUDES TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

It can be.

Work may be where you feel safe and respected and what is happening at

SAFETY AT WORK

Make a record of how the family violence is affecting you at work: dates, times, details

Check your workplace health & safety policy: many workplaces have one. Your

WHAT IS FAMILY VIOLENCE?

Domestic violence can take many different forms

DATA COLLECTED BY THE WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION AND AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL SHOW THAT ONE

OUT OF THREE WOMEN HAS EXPERIENCED VIOLENCE AND THAT VIOLENCE IS THE LEADING CAUSE OF

INTERNATIONAL DEATH AMONGST WOMEN AGED 16 TO 44. IT IS ESTIMATED THAT 70% OF THIS VIOLENCE OCCURS IN

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE IMPACTING AT WORK

It can be stressful, upsetting and distracting. It can make it hard to

IT’S IMPORTANT TO REMEMBER THAT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE IS NOT YOUR FAULT AND YOU

SAFE AT HOME, SAFE AT WORK

You only need to tell your workplace about things that directly affect or impact on your

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

With grateful thanks to Ludo McFerran,

WEB: WWW.DVANDWORK.UNSW.EDU.AU

PROJECT MANAGER

SAFE AT HOME, SAFE AT WORK

AUSTRALIAN DOMESTIC AND FAMILY VIOLENCE CLEARINGHOUSE

WEB: WWW.DVANDWORK.UNSW.EDU.AU
If your employer treats you unfairly or tried to sack you because of your experience of domestic violence, you need to contact the union as soon as possible.

What can I do if my employer treats me unfairly at work or sacks me?

- Discuss the meeting with the union in advance of the meeting so you are prepared.
- Keep a copy of workplace policies and procedures, such as disciplinary policies. Keep the copies safe, but not at home where they may be in danger.
- Get managers to put their concerns and issues in writing. If the manager refuses, talk to the union representative or  the medical staff at the workplace. Lastly, you can use a diary and write down the incidents.

What if I'm being prevented from getting to work (or coming in late)?

- Have a witness, even if this is a family member who is not the abuser. The witness can help write down what happened.
- Police can trace calls and order phone records.
- Save and print out copies of facebook (and similar social networks) messages (in case the abuser tries to make it look like you sent them).

Attitudes to domestic violence vary: some workplaces are supportive, providing paid leave and flexible working arrangements. Others are less supportive or not supportive at all.

If any of these things are happening, you should tell your workplace. Your job and your safety might be at risk.

If domestic violence is affecting your attendance, performance and safety at work then it could impact on you at work in the following ways:

- Struggling to manage your workload and deadlines
- Feeling tired, exhausted and stressed
- Not being able to work at your usual level
- Having trouble concentrating
- Being late to work
- Not being able to perform your duties and can also be a workplace safety risk.

Domestic violence can be stressful, upsetting and distracting. It can make it hard to perform your job.

IS DOMESTIC VIOLENCE A WORKPLACE ISSUE?

Domestic and family violence is defined as violence between people in same-sex relationships, opposite-sex relationships or relationships where one person is the parent of the other person's child. Violence tends to increase over time, becoming more serious and more frequent. It can cause death amongst women aged 16 to 44. It is estimated that 70% of this violence occurs in the home. One in three women and one in ten men have experienced violence in the home. The violence is often traumatic and can lead to long-term physical and psychological effects.

Data collected by the world health organization and amnesty international show that one out of three women has experienced violence and that violence is the leading cause of death amongst women of child-bearing age.

The violence tends to increase over time, becoming more serious and more frequent. It is often traumatic and can lead to long-term physical and psychological effects.

Attitudes to domestic violence vary: some workplaces are supportive, providing paid leave and flexible working arrangements. Others are less supportive or not supportive at all.

Another thing to consider is whether you need to negotiate time off to organise your medical care.

What can I do if I'm being prevented from getting to work (or coming in late)?

- Have a witness, even if this is a family member who is not the abuser. The witness can help write down what happened.
- Police can trace calls and order phone records.
- Save and print out copies of facebook (and similar social networks) messages (in case the abuser tries to make it look like you sent them).

Another thing to consider is whether you need to negotiate time off to organise your medical care.